

Glasgow Women's Library

Mixing The Colours: women speaking about sectarianism

Women speaking...

With the recognition that sectarianism is not simply a problem of men and football and that people experience sectarianism differently, Mixing The Colours is addressing how sectarianism affects women in diverse communities.

Through the project we are supporting and facilitating community discussion of experiences to encourage women to develop, implement and lead on effective and sustainable solutions to sectarianism

Women across Scotland are accessing our growing resource of books, short stories and films with sectarian themes, female characters and protagonists through workshops and learning events. They are addressing the noted lack of literature and film resources by contributing their own creative writing, poetry, audio and film interviews.

Women are speaking about intersectional bigotry, anti-social behaviour, issues of challenging sectarianism, revealing hidden accounts and sharing their hopes and aspirations for a tolerant and peaceful Scotland of the future.

Mixing The Colours will launch a publication and film at our national conference on 20th March 2015.

If you would like to find out more, access the resource or get involved please contact Rachel Thain-Gray on 0141-550-2267 or email rachel.thain-gray@womenslibrary.org.uk

Glasgow Women's Library

23 Landressy Street, Glasgow G40 1BP

Call 0141 550 2267, email info@womenslibrary.org.uk, visit us online at womenslibrary.org.uk, find us on Facebook (facebook.com/womenslibrary) or follow the GWL Kettle (@gwlkettle) on Twitter.

Registered Company No: 178507 Charity No: SC029881

